San Juan, P.R. - - Officers at the Puerto Rico Convention Center announced the inauguration of their new state-of-the-art conference room facilities, a 25-person corporate space equipped with plasma screens, sound system, projection equipment, Wi-Fi and the latest in computer technology.

“We listen to our clients needs, and this was one at the top of their list,” said PRCC General Manager Blarys Segarra. “We now not only have the best and most modern banquet rooms and convention halls in the Caribbean and Latin America, but also the best equipped conference rooms with the same level of high quality service.”

The new conference room was designed to provide clients with a “fully functional corporate room outside their headquarters” where they could work, meet and greet colleagues, clients and sponsors of their own before, during or after their event at the Puerto Rico Convention Center.

“This is an inviting corporate space that serves several purposes,” Segarra said. “We have already rented it out to local companies who need to meet with their marketing and sales teams and directors in a professional setting outside their offices but without the external distractions that hotels can impose.”

The new conference room, inaugurated by Price Waterhouse, is conveniently located next to the PRCC Business Center. Two masterpieces belonging to the Puerto Rico Tourism Company Private Art Collection frame its double-door majestic entrance. The paintings are “Compartiendo la Misma Fe,” by award-winning local artista Arnaldo Roche Rabel and “Transfiguración del Paisaje,” by the well-known and highly respected Rafael Rivera Rosa. Three artistic impressions of the winning photograph by Ariana Valerio decorate the interior of the new conference room. Valerio’s photograph was part of the PRCC employee photography contest “Retrata Tu Orgullo.”
